Armour Institute and Its Advantages.

CHICAGO, ILL., June 2, 1900.

Armour Institute of Technology was founded in 1892 by Mr. Phillip D. Armour, Sr., of Chicago. A very pretty and true story is told of its inception. Dr. F. W. Gunsaulus was the pastor of the church to which Mr. Armour went. One day he was preaching on the needs of the generation of boys just growing up and what he would do for them if he had the means. After the sermon Mr. Armour went up to him and said:

"Do you mean what you said to-day?"

"I do," replied the doctor.

"Then give me five years of your time and I will furnish you the money for such a school as you mentioned."

It was agreed and that was the beginning of Armour Institute.

The aim of the founder was to make it one of the leading technological schools in the country. To make it a school where a young man could get the best and cheapest education of its kind possible. It was not intended for either the rich or poor separately but was to reach all classes.

Doctor Gunsaulus became the president of the school. No better man could have been chosen for the place. His whole aim has been to build it up. For this purpose Mr. Armour has given it over $3,000,000. Besides this large sum, he has given the proceeds from the rent of the Armour Flats for its support. These flats occupy a whole block adjoining the school.

The college building is a very costly one. It is very handsome, both outside and inside, and is the finest school building in Chicago. As one enters, on his right is the library. This is the largest room in the building, having over sixteen thousand books in it and all the leading periodicals of the day. Here may be seen the students at their study and reading.

The laboratories are the best equipped of any school in the U. S. They far excel those of the Boston Technological, which is the older and more widely known of the two schools. The apparatus for all the departments is the best and is modern. It is in these laboratories and the shops that the students get their practical instruction.

There are five courses of instruction which require four years for each; viz: Mechanical, Electrical, Civil Architectural, and a course in Science and Mathematics. These courses are planned by some of the foremost men in their professions and are as good as can be secured anywhere. The faculty is composed of the best instructors that can be secured, many of whom are quite widely known in the scientific world.

Associated with the college is the Academy or preparatory school. It is here that boys and girls from the grammar schools are prepared for college. It has four courses, the Classical, English, Medicine and Law, and technological preparatory courses. Thorough instruction is given in each, several of the college faculty having classes in the Academy. What is learned here is the foundation of the college education.

The social life of the school is not neglected. Organizations exist among the students. Among these are the glee and mandolin clubs, the photographic society, fraternities and others. Athletics are greatly encouraged and the school has one of the best gymnasiums in the city.

Besides the school education there is the city education. The student becomes acquainted with the hurry and confusion of a great city and the ways of people and business men. Then, too, there are the great power plants, manufactures, etc., which the student may see and study.

There have been three classes graduated from the college. Every one of the graduates have positions. Each June, calls are received at the Institute for graduates to fill positions.

Thus far Armour Institute has grown in a few years from a new school to the leader of its kind. There is only one better in the world—and that is in Switzerland. The aim of its founder has been accomplished.

A STUDENT.

Quick Relief for Asthma.

Miss Maude Dickens, Parsons, Kans., writes: "I suffered eight years with asthma in its worst form. I had several attacks during the last year and was not expected to live through them. I began using Foley's Honey and Tar, and it has never failed to give immediate relief."

Machiavellian.

The policy pursued by Mr. McKinley and his whole administration is the startling counterpart of that suggested by the iniquitous Italian, Niccolo Machiavelli, 400 years ago, to Lorenzo the Magnificent, and practised by the infamous Borgias.

Like McKinley, Machiavelli pretended to be a sincere Republican and a true lover of liberty, but he was willing, like McKinley, to give up his cherished Republican form of government for the splendor and glory of a one man power, upheld by well trained national armies.

In "The Prince" his precepts inculcated craft, cunning and perfidy and success was his only badge of honor. Lord Macaulay held him up as a sanctified philosopher and the English statesmen to this day regard him as their pattern of diplomacy.

Here are some of his precepts, applicable to the Republican administration, and as alike as two peas in a pod:

"A prudent ruler cannot, nor ought he to, keep faith when such fidelity shall turn against him, and the reasons which moved him to make his promises are spent. * * * We must recognize this, that a ruler, and especially a new ruler (one serving his first term), cannot observe all those things which men deem good; being often obliged, for the welfare of the state, to act contrary to humanity, contrary to religion. And, besides, he must have a mind ready to shift as the winds and eddies of fortune bid; not to depart from good, if he can help himself, but to know how to do evil, if he must. * * * Therefore a ruler must take great care that no word shall slip from his mouth that shall not be full of piety, trust, humanity and simple faith; and he must appear, to eye and ear, all compact of these. Let a ruler, then, make the state prosper and his methods shall always be judged honorable and be praised by all; because the vulgar are always caught by appearance and by the event; and in this world there are none but the vulgar. A certain ruler of today—it is well not to name names—proclaims nothing but peace and faith; had he observed either he would have toppled the state and his own reputation."

And with the maggot of imperialism gnawing at his breast, McKinley is goaded into saying with Richard, Duke of Gloucester:

"I can add colors to the chameleon; change shape with Proteus, for advantages, and set the murderous Machiavel to school. Can I do this, and cannot get a crown? Tut! were it farther off I'll pluck it down."—King Henry VI., Pt. III. Act III. Sc. 2.

This was in England, and when the war with Spain opened his eyes to new possibilities, the president turned aside from the traditions of the republic, adopted the policy which England had pursued, and in justification of his actions, which involved not only the most outrageous breach of faith, but an equally unjustifiable "commercial aggression," he repeated the pharisaical platitudes contemptible cant by which England has always justified her own oppressions. In this he found support from the tory leaders of England and to them he looked for the approval of his Machiavellian policy, and they gave it with the most flattering and cordial support.

So now we have the cuticle flayed from this imperial creation and see it in all its hideousness and malignity. It is a monster which devours the people for the benefit of the ruling class, and unless rendered harmless by its crushing defeat, it will always rise up to plague the nation.—The Press Bulletin.

A Question of Principle.

There is now before the American people a question second in importance to none that has ever occupied the attention of the statesmen in this or any other country.

This question is, Shall the United States remain true to the principles which have made this the greatest nation in the world; or shall principles of republicanism be repudiated, and the principles of imperialism be adopted in their stead.

It may be objected by some that this is a political question, and that being such, it has no proper place in the columns of The Sentinel of Liberty. Let us see.

This is indeed a political question, though not yet a party question, though it may be long become such. But every question pertaining to government affairs is political. Slavery was once a political question. Prohibition is still a living political issue; while only a few years ago the maintenance of the Sunday laws was the supreme issue of a state political campaign in California.

These questions are cited merely because in each is involved a vital principle.

I AM 88 YEARS OLD, and never used any remedy equal to Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. It gives quick and permanent relief in gripes, colds, coughs and colds. It makes weak lungs strong.—Mrs. M. A. McQuade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Many issues are political merely, being wholly matters of policy, not involving vital principle any more than does the question with the farmer of whether he shall follow diversified farming or devote his energies wholly to the production of wheat, or corn, or hay, or potatoes.

But the question now before the American people is not one of mere policy, but of vital, fundamental principle. It is this, Shall we, not only as a nation but as individuals, continue to respect God-given rights? or shall we deny those rights and trample them under our feet?

We cannot avoid individual responsibility in this matter by remaining silent spectators. He who fails to protest when his neighbor's rights are invaded, and who by that failure gives to that invasion the sanction of silent consent, forfeits thereby the right to protest when his own rights are trampled under foot.

This nation was established upon the principle that rights are God-given and inalienable, and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.

This principle involves both civil and religious liberty. And it is impossible to deny the principle as applied to "inferior races" in distant lands and to maintain it as applied to ourselves in our own land. It is either true of all peoples everywhere, or it is not true of any people anywhere. Therefore he who by his silence now consents that this principle is not true in Porto Rico and the Philippines Islands consents to the same thing for this country, and for himself and his children.

When Israel demanded a king, the Lord sent Samuel to tell them just what was involved in their demand. And Samuel said: "This will be the manner of the king that shall rule over you: He will take your sons, and appoint them for himself, for his chariots, and to be his horsemen; and they shall run before his chariots; and he will appoint him captains over thousands, and captains over fifties; and will set them to ear (or plant) his ground, and to reap his harvest, and to make his instruments of war, and the instruments of his chariots.

And ye shall cry out in that day because of your king which you have chosen; and the Lord will not hear you in that day." I Sam. 8:11-18.

These words are just as true to-day of the policy of imperialism as they were of Israel's king. It will not only take fields and vineyards by means of taxation for the building and equipping of navies and the maintenance of armies, but it will take our sons, as it has already taken thousands of young men, not only to be servants, but to learn the art of war—to kill and to be killed upon the field of battle.

It is just as true now that this government cannot endure partly republican and partly imperialistic as it was true in 1860 that it could "not long endure half slave and half free." Imperialism cannot be confined to those outlying islands that have come to us as spoils of war. The policy pursued toward them is sure to react with disastrous results upon our most cherished rights.

Indeed the policy pursued thus far toward Porto Rico and the Philippines, and which bids fair to be adopted as a settled policy by the nation, is the true measure of the decadence of that loyalty to principle which characterized the early days of the Republic. The degree of liberty preserved among us as a people seems to be due more to the native conservatism of mankind than to adherence to principle for its own sake. It is to be feared that we have reached the time foretold by Thomas Jefferson in his "Notes on Virginia":

"The spirit of the times may alter, will alter. Our rulers will become corrupt, our people careless. * * * It will not then be necessary to resort every moment to the people for support. They will be forgotten, therefore, and their rights disregarded. They will forget themselves; but in the sole faculty of making money, and will never think of uniting to effect due respect to their rights. The shackles, therefore, which shall not be knocked off at the conclusion of this war, will remain on us long, will be made heavier, till our rights shall revive or expire in convulsion."—The Sentinel of Liberty.

Would Not Suffer So Again for Fifty Times Its Price.

I awoke last night with severe pains in my stomach. I never felt so badly in all my life. When I came down to work this morning I felt so weak I could hardly work. I went to Miller & McCurdy's drug store and they recommended Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It worked like magic and one dose fixed me all right. It certainly is the finest thing I ever used for stomach trouble.

I shall not be without it in my home hereafter, for I should not care to endure the sufferings of last night again for fifty times its price.—G. H. Wilson, Livermore, Burgettstown, Washington Co., Pa. This remedy is for sale by the druggist.
